

POSSIBLE PRESENTATIONS

Anita Silvey

Anita Silvey is an engaging and versatile speaker whose deep knowledge of children's book publishing, libraries, and education will help your guests arrive at a better understanding of the field. Programs can also be planned to meet your group's specific needs. Please contact Winding Oak to invite Anita to speak at your library, school, museum, convention, or group meeting. For more about Anita Silvey, visit www.anitasilvey.com

Explorers

Most appreciated by students and teachers in grades 4 and 5

Author Anita Silvey admits that she has always been something of a coward – spiders, snakes, and crocodiles lead the list of creatures that terrify her. To make herself braver, she writes books about explorers, scientists who travel to exotic places and observe these surroundings. In an illustrated lecture on three books – The Plant Hunters, Untamed: The Wild Life of Jane Goodall, and Undaunted about Birute Galdikas in Borneo – Silvey presents a funny, but educational, talk about female and male scientists who had great courage and what they discovered.

Celebrating the Caldecott:

The stories behind some of the great Caldecott Medal and Honor Books

Most appreciated by teachers, librarians, parents, and children's literature students

Looking at 80 years of Caldecott history, Anita Silvey highlights some of the great Caldecott choices and the stories behind the books. Bringing her experience both as a publisher and critic, she takes audiences behind the curtains – to reveal insights into the publishing and promotion of these titles. In examining a hundred years of picture book publishing, Silvey shows how the original ideas of the founders of the Caldecott award have affected books and children over the years.

Everything I Need to Know I Learned from a Children's Book

Most appreciated by librarians, teachers, college students, general audience, and parents

Accompanying book: Everything I Need to Know I Learned from a Children's Book

In Everything I Need to Know I Learned from a Children's Book, Anita Silvey provides insights into the question that has informed her entire career – what are the best books for children to read and what do adults remember about them? Anita talks about some of our great children's books, as well as the people they inspired, such as financiers Peter Lynch and Steve Forbes, actor Kirk Douglas and actresses Kathy Bates and Julianne Moore, folk singer hero Pete Seeger and country singer Brad Paisley, activist Robert F. Kennedy, Jr., artist Andrew Wyeth, and comic book creator Stan Lee. Anita highlights the roles that parents, librarians, and teachers have played in shaping our national heroes.

Possible Presentations by Anita Silvey

www.windingoak.com

page 2 of 3

True Stories, True Heroines and Heroes, and True Believers

Most appreciated by librarians, teachers, and college students

Accompanying books: Untamed, Let Your Voice Be Heard, The Plant Hunters, Henry Knox

After many years of being a children's book expert, Anita Silvey published her first book for young readers. Exploring her childhood and her journey to becoming a writer for children, she discusses her own needs as a young reader – and those of today's children. And then she presents the fascinating process of working on the award-winning Untamed: The Wild Life of Jane Goodall and Let Your Voice Be Heard: The Life and Times of Pete Seeger. In a book that general audiences have found fascinating (even spouses appreciate it!), Anita Silvey demonstrates the best practices in narrative nonfiction and why children and adults need stories about true heroes and heroines.

100 Best Books for Children: Our Greatest Books and the Stories Behind Them

Most appreciated by librarians, teachers, college students, general audience, and parents

Accompanying book: 100 Best Books for Children,

In a fascinating lecture, Anita Silvey explores 100 years of classic books from The Tale of Peter Rabbit to Because of Winn-Dixie, looking at the remarkable stories of how the books were created. Dr. Seuss got turned down 27 times; Robert McCloskey kept ducks in his bathtub, and The Story of Ferdinand was burned by Hitler. The stories behind the books will help the audience appreciate their favorite books in an entirely different way. Then members of the audience will share their favorite contemporary books – those they think will stand the test of time.

The Children's Book-a-Day Almanac: Finding the Right Books for Your Children

Most appreciated by librarians, teachers, college audiences, and parents

Accompanying book: The Children's Book-a-Day Almanac

How do you find the books that children will love and remember into adult years? The Children's Book-a-Day Almanac, online, allows you to read about one great book every day. In this illustrated lecture, Anita Silvey presents new and old beloved books and ideas to tie them to every day of the year.

Questions and Answers about Contemporary Publishing

Most appreciated by writers, illustrators, and college audiences

Accompanying book: The Children's Book-a-Day Almanac

In a strictly question and answer session, publishing veteran Anita Silvey will answer questions about the state of publishing, self-publishing, and submitting books for publication.

Possible Presentations by Anita Silvey

www.windingoak.com

page 3 of 3

The Best Novels for Grade K-6 Classrooms

Most appreciated by librarians, teachers, and college audiences

When it comes to children's books, not all are created equally. Anita Silvey will share a carefully selected list of the best novels ever written for children, those that have stood the test of time and engaged readers year after year. She'll reveal the secrets of how these books became classics, their "back stories," providing wonderful anecdotes to share with children. In an entertaining and inspiring lecture, she provides a wealth of contemporary material – from the printed page to YouTube – that will bring these books alive for children.

Audio-visual requirements for all presentations:

LED Projector, screen, darkened room, lavalier microphone, podium, display table next to podium